IS IT PEACE ?

This morning's telegrams announce that the whole of the St. Petersburg Press, with but one ed, we are told, Admiral Alexeief ecoption, a clamouring for peace. The Tear as summoned, we are told, duminal Alexeied so conter on the situation, and it may possibly to that the Emperor has at last decided to atom to the voice of reason and humanity, and not to the suggestions of a vulgar vanity and mistaken dictates of dynastic security. Hose who are best acquainted with Russis re convinced that if, by a stroke of his pen, war Nicholas brought—as he could bring—his ghastly tale of bloodshed, anguish, and eventation to an end, he would be blessed by his subjects from one end of his wast dominions to the other, and he would never easer from one of them, outside the coteris of corrupt obliganchs which fences him in, a aunt or a represent. This war, even when trought and the sense military promenade, has never been oppular with the overwhelming mass of the Support's subjects. In so far as they knew happing about the mysterious causes which records it is such as the prometh it about, they realized that it would be a neare military promenade, has never been oppular with the overwhelming mass of the Support's subjects. In so far as they knew happing about the mysterious causes which records it about, they realized that it would the subjects that it would the source of the content it about, they realized that it would the source of the content is about, they realized that it would the source of the content is about the way the content in the content in the content is about the way the content in the conte

there was no limit to the heroic scorifices they were ready to make. Rarely, if ever, has the world witnessed to colossal and of self-sheer spation as that which left to Napheot the Grat only the askes of a capital, reached sign an advance, contested foot by foot, through, coomer you were to have a self-sheer sheer to the sheer and the sheer and the sheer and the sheer and the same and the sheer and the sheet and the sheer and the sheet and the sheet and the sheet and and intolerable taxation that create hangers on the Court may exhibit a country and the sheet and the sheer and the sheet and the s he is asked to sled his blood and bear increased and intolerable cashed his blood and bear increased and intolerable cashed his blood and bear increased and intolerable cashed his bear increased his blood h

of Manchuria. To the Tear this horrible war has been but an affair of outposts of Empire; to the Japanese it has been from the first a straggle for independence openly and cynically threatened. If Russia accepted the most stringent terms proffered by Japan, no appreciable loss would be felt by the Empire at large; if Japan had been vanquished, and the terms of peace had been dictated—as was arrogantly beased should be the case—in Tokio, the rise nationality of the Far East would have been trampled out of existence, unless Great Britals and the United States had come, as they must have come, to the rescue. To accept unpalatable and the United States had come, as they must have come, to the seene. To accept unpathabit terms of peace is, no doubt, to lose presige. But prestige—like credit—is a good thing or a bad thing in accordance with the use to which it is applied. Nobody prestands that loss of prestige by Rensis would be followed by are volt of the nationalities she has subjugate in Central Asia, or that it would be mide ancrease by Grest Britain for extending the boundaries of her Idudian Empire at the expesse of the Tear. The maintenance of British prestige in the Bast is a defensive messestir, out a stimulas to aggression. Our borders are as wide as we case to make them; an invasion or in the Bast is a defensive necessity, not a stimula to a agression. Our borders are as wide as we care to make them; an invasion or an attempted invasion of our Indian dominion would be as wanton and as predatory as any of the great raids which have not be reported to the Grooting East's since the days of Alexander the Great. The truth is that Russia as a whole is so invertiberable as to stand in no need ofpretige. Napoleon I. discovered that fact, and so did the allied armies in 1853-6. But as much cannot be said of the autocracy. So long as the Emperor represents the sentiments, religious Emperor represents the sentiments, religion and patriotic, of all his subjects his pos in the hour of victory, supreme and pregnable. But when he is out of to in the hour of victory, supreme and pregnable. But when he is out of it with the feelings of his people, whe demands unlimited ascrifices for unworth jects, when he scorns respectful protests all that is most intelligent and represent within his Empire, them some holds semblance of power on more precarious! There is no blinking the truth that from Black Sea to the Baltic Russia is seen that the control of the protection of with unconcealed discontent, organisat revolution takes as a large organisation ordarin Moscow, in St. Petersburg, and in Warss But against the vis inerties of an Empire a hundred and forty millions no Tear, however powerful, no Cossacks, however truculent, cs. a hundred and forty millions no Tear, by opwarful, no Cossacks, however tracules make headway. It is in no spirit of he to Russia that we point out these simp controverable, almost platitudinous fac greater disaster could befull Europe world than that the huge Empire with present acknowledges allegiance to the should fall a victim to irreparable disor, tion, helpless demonshisation, and be bankruptcy. Anarchy, on however at scale, is dangerous and infectious, but as afflicting so wasta an Empire as that of e, very rapidly drifting
